"Sure Things " Plenty Among This Morning's Track Tipsters.

GRAVESEND RACE TRACK. N. Y.. May 15.— Frobably the most disappointed man at the Broocklyn Jockey Club track this morning was Supt. Benj. Bruah. He has worked unceasingly for months on the track in order that the cracks who will start for the big Brooklyn Handicap stake might have a good and fast course to run upon. The heavy showers last night did not disturb him, but the fine; drizzling rain that ing has made the old man feel very bad. He hopes that it will clear, and every new and then he mutters. 'Give me three hours of sunshine and I'll have a track for a king." about 9, 30 o'clock raised his hopes some but they were quickly dampened by an inreased fall of rain and the total disappearance of the blue patch.

Despite the gloomy weather, however, things are very lively here this morning. On the track a score of black mites of stable boys are exercising thoroughbreds. Some are walked, others trotted and a few are Under the grand stand a hundred men are getting bars and restaurants ready for the thousands of hungry and thirsty people who will swoop down upon them in a few hours. In the grand stand a score of women are polishing chairs and woodwork. Secretary McIntyre and his assistant, Mr. Cornellsen, are as busy as bees on a honeysuckle vine.

A hundred trainers, lockeys and owners of small stables clustered about them, demanding badges or asking for festall shout this or that race. The genial scoreiary is as stave as usual and sends every one away satisfied.

Over four hundred thoroughbreds are now quartered at the track. The demand for quarters was unprecedented and Supt. Itrush was compelled to creet fifty-four new stables in order to accommodate the rush.

The track taken as a whole locks beautiful. The inclosure is carpeted with grass a foot deep and the deep green color is very grateful to the spectator's sys.

Around the edge of the inclosure the grass has been mowed, and is of a lighter color than the centre. The effect is very pretty in front of the grand stand.

The work done by the cracks has already been told the public in the columns of THE EVENING WORLD.

Badge, Los Angeles, Come-to-Taw, Race-land, Orifiamme and Sir Dixor are all good on a muddy track as they are on a fast one. There are any quentity of tips floating around the track, and a man might invest a small fortune playing the "sure things that can't lose."

A. Belmont, the banker, thinks he has a 'cinch' with his two entries Raceland and Fides. If, on the other hand, the others hold off and let Fides get a big lead, the filly may go right on and do the trick.

The situation will be interesting to say the least. All the cracks have master bands to guide them, and the struggle will be a grand one. guide them, and the struggle will be a grand one.

The Dweer Brothers are confident of doing the trick with Sir Dixon and are jubilant this morning over the prospect of a heavy frack.

It will just suit Sir Dixon's less, they say, and with "Snapper' Garrison in the saddle shrewd betting men are asking," How can they beat him?

will be ruthlessly trampled upon, and in the betting ring there is no time for apologies. Everything goes there.

Twenty new boxes have been added to the ring. This makes 100 in all. In addition there are twelve French mutuel boxes, with five cashiers to pay off winners.

The public, therefore, will have no cause for complaint. For small betters a $2 box will be made on the field, and so every one will be satisfied.

None of the cracks were out on the track this morning; they were all given their final work two days ago, and now they wait with nervously quivering fiants until they can be summoned for the man who will start them on their way for the big prize.

Mr. Belmont has scratched Fides and will rely on fiaceland, the track exactly suiting the latter.

Robert Pinkerton has a force of sixty men at the track; several are in citizen's clothes and will care for the light-fingered gentry. He formed his men together shortly before I o'clock and elected every one who could not show a badge. Some of the excuses made by the ejected ones were very amusing. Train after train deposited loads of racegoers at the Jockey Club's door, and there is every indication that the predicted 20,000 will not fall far short.

by W. M. Haight, the proprietor of the hotel. Their dismissal was to take effect this morning.
At 7.35 o'clock Night Clerk Matt Sparks. sitting at his desk, heard three reports of a pistol in the basement, where the employees

The story was quickly told by one of the amployees.

While Lytle sat eating his breakfast, Mura had stolen in on tip toe.

He had a club in his hand, two and a half feet long and two inches in diameter, such as are to be found in every big hotel. It was shaped like a baton and about the size of a policeman's night stick. Creeping upon his enemy he dealt him s ringing blow upon the back of the neck near the skull.

Lyte turned in his chair, and as the stick was raised for a second blow drew the pistol from his hip pocket and fired at his assailant.

Three shots were fired and at the second shot little Tura Mura, fell upon his back. One of the bullets mussed its mark.

Lyte's hand dropped on his knee and he seemed completely dazed. An ambulance came from Boosewelt Hos-pital, and the surgeon, after a brief exam-ination, said:
"One bullet went into the thigh. That is not a serious wound. The other passed through the left lung, and it is certainly fatal."

Mura was removed to the hospital.

Meantime some one had summoned a policeman.

Policeman McGinley came. He is a big. burly fellow, and he strode up to the stupepied Lytle, who was now weeping, and demanded:

"Give me that pistol!" at the same time taking it from the perveless black hand.

Then, according to the frightened people there, the policeman struck the lad a severe blow upon the forehead, either with his club or with the butt of the revolver. The blow made a cut in Lytle's head, from which the blood flowed, mantling his face in crimson fluid.

The policeman claims that the boy resisted arrest, while the bystanders assert that the boy was too weak from the effects of Tura Mura's blow to make any resistance, and claim that he had not risen from his chair nor said a word or moved a hand.

Lytle was taken to the Forty-seventh street station, and later was held at the Yorkville Police Court to await the result of Mura's injuries.

At 10.30 o'clock Coroner Levy was notified by the Roosevelt Hospital that Tura Mura could not live, and the Coroner went to the hospital to take Mura's ante-mortem statement.
